

Model free prediction and Bootstrap

Dimitris Politis

Department of Mathematics, University of California, San Diego

dpolitis@ucsd.edu

Abstract

The bootstrap has changed the paradigm for statistical theory and practice in the last 40 years. Instead of relying on restrictive and possibly unrealistic parametric assumptions, the computer Simulation implicit in the bootstrap allows the practitioner to tackle nonparametric problems in a straightforward way. Going beyond the nonparametric framework, I will also give an introduction to Model free inference in the context of regression.